Parm Notice

A Prairie Farmer correspondent de-clares that dipping the fegs of fowls in kerosene oil is sure cure for seurvy. Cows do not, on an average, produce more than half the milk they would if well-fed and eared for. Little messes bring little milk. We are beginning to hear of whole dairies of cows yielding large quantities of butter, and generally the profit on each cow is $100 a year, considerably more than the prefits on a bired man. All this is because farmers have begin raising cows for their own use.

Avnew dodge of dead beats at the West is to quarter themselves on a farm of a week or so, under pretense of buying it. Then they leave for the purpose of getting the purchase money, and never come back.

The older the pasture the better, because it is stocked with a great variety of grasses, all of which are fiae; and fine grass is always nutritious. Newly-seeded pastures make poor feed, and the butter coming therefrom can-

Ramoval of llurrs from Wool.

The United States Economist con-tains a communication from Mr. Thomas Crossley in reference to an improved method of removing the burrs from wool, which he claims as constituting a wool, which he claims as constituting a very great advance in the manipulation of this staple. Not only is the weol made perfectly clean by the process, but it is also hieached perfectly white, however yellow may have been its previous condition; and, thus prepared, it will receive any desired color in a shorter time and at less expense then manal in consequence of the uniform usnal, in consequence of the nulform condition in which it is left by the

By Mr. Crossley's process the wool is first simply scoured and washed clean in the ordinary manner, and, after re-moving the water by means of the hydro-extracter, it is spread upon racks, to a thicknes of four to six inches, to a thicknes of four to six inches, and submitted time gas generated from a combination of materials, which serves to decompose thoroughly the claw or board of the burr, or other vegetable matter, or scurf, mixed with the wool; so that all the burrs, grass seeds, and other foreign substances, when submitted to the action of the burr picker, are at once removed, and the wool is are at once removed, and the wool is left in a soft and elustic condition. The labor and material required to produce this result are trifling, the spreading of the wool to receive the gas being of the wool to receive the gas being the spreading of the wool to receive the gas being the spread of the wool to receive the wool to receive the spread of the wool to receive t about the only addition to that usually required.

A correspondent writes concerning sngar beets: "I have been raising these beets for three years. For feeding to cows I find nothing hetter. I have raised as high as three tons from one pound of seed. I sow in drills in 18-inch rows, and thin them to 6 to 8-inch. The seed can be had at the seed atoret, where I always get mine. With good seed, a rich soil, made in good condition, one acre would be sufficient.

The lecturer cited a great many other three of the singular inthence of to feed 20 cows for five months, say you give each cow one peck at a feed, after entting np fine with au ax or corn-knife. entting np fine with au ax or corn-knite. I have had some of them to weigh as high as eighteen pounds."

Dr. William A, Hammondread an interesting paper hefore the members of the Medice-Legal Association of New York on "Morbid Impulse," that strange physic force which "impels men to the commission of crime when there would appear to be no possible reason for it.

We are beginning to hear of whole dairies of cows yielding large quantities of butter, and generally the profit on each cow is $100 a year, considerably more than the prefits on a hired man. All this is because farmers have begin raising cows for their own use.

We are informed by some men of figures that too much grain is raised, for 18 bushels are produced to each person, while the largest amount that possibly can be consumed is from 8 to 10 bushels per head.

We can be given by the profit on the effect of the morbid introduced in the many wind while in his garden with his apade. Weeds are so abundant in Ireland that the National Educational Commission propose to eradicate them by teaching the children that go to school what damage they do.

such condition mentally that he took pleasure in doing harm to others. Not long sgo a young man of good family became the victim of a singular impulse. He could not resist the temptation to attack women in the street, throw them down, and take their shoes from their feet. When he was arrested sud his trunks were examined they were found to be full of shoes of ali sizes and qualities. When asked what reason he had for his condact he could only answer that he acted under an impulse that he could not resist. The young msn was of irreproachable character, and was taken with this infatuation at a moment's uotice.

Dr. Dixon reports the case of a gentleman's son at school who developed suddenly an nucontrellable impulse to steal sheets and blankets. Except for this peculiarity the boy was held in the highest estimation. In 1824, a well-known citizen of a French city killed two children in the woods in the presence of their mother. When placed in jail he attempted to kill his fellow prisoners and to burn the jail. After a carefully conducted trial he was found

The plea of insanity had been entered in his deleuse, hut it was entirely disregarded. Many other cases were cited from the inrisprudence of France, showing the force of habit in causing men to repeat certain erimea. One woman, known ns a good, kiul-heurted mother and neighbor, murdered twenty-eight persons by poison before being detected; another had killed fifleen. In neither case was any renson assigned.

Msrgaret Dwyer was born in Ireland and mstried to Dwyer in 1867 at Bristol, it. I. Dwyer removed to Williamslurg in 1863, and fonad pretty steady employment as a cooper. Maggie, the oidest of the children, was born at Bristol early in 1868. A second child, born in Brookiyn, died when but a few montha old. Jemmy was born in 1870, and Tim, "the hally," was a year and seven months old. When Jemmy was born, four years ago, Mra. Dwyer suffered from puerperal fever of a typhoid yype, and two weeks after his birth hecame delirions and so violent that she needed the constant services of an attendant and careful watchiag. As the children grew up it became barder and harder for Mr. Dwyer with his cooper's wages to make both ends meet. Mrs. Dwyer took in sewing and sat at her machine all dny. From what can be gathered from her neighbors she lived almost a recluse life. She rarely appeared ont side her room und never stopped to gossip. The merest salutation was all she gave her neighbors when she met them, and that so distantly that they accused her of being "prond." She did not drink, as far as is known. Her husband is described as "a decent, quiet man" and drank but little. The honsehold was ruther an odd onc—always quiet. Husband and wife have never disputed so angrily that their cotenants overhead them, and the three children were wondera of quietness and good manners, aever running loose in the street, never dirty, and alone with their mother in the one room most of the day.
